

UNIVERSITY PARTNERSHIP AT LCCC

The University Partnership program at Lorain County Community College was created with support from a visionary community that recognized the powerful impact raising educational attainment in Lorain County could have on our community and our region. Today, the program has expanded to many partner colleges and universities, offering more than 100 programs and more than 7,000 graduates.

LCCC is the first community college in Ohio to have a University Partnership (<https://www.lorainccc.edu/up/>) program, where students can select from over 60 bachelor's and over 40 master's degrees, all offered by leading universities. The University Partnership provides students with a quality education that, combined with LCCC coursework, is the best value in higher education.

Classes are held in The Dr. Roy A. Church University Center, a facility designed specifically for students enrolled in University Partnership degree programs. Some courses are also held at the University Partnership Ridge Campus in North Ridgeville or online.

Degrees cover a wide range of specialties, including business administration, biology, computer science and engineering, nursing, public health, education and more.

Thousands of people have found the University Partnership at LCCC to be the best path to reach their educational and career goals.
